BLIND CHIROPRACTOR IN LOS ANGELES IN 1915?

Brian A. Smith, D.C., Barcelona, Spain

While in practice in the Los Angeles, for a time I resided in the Echo Park suburb, one of the oldest such subdivisions found within the Greater Los Angeles Metropolitan area. Being somewhat of a history addict, I tend to devour information about topics I find interesting. One such item was The History of Sunset Boulevard, episode 3 which was subtitled Washington Heights, Echo Park. As I inattentively watched the history program, my attention was snapped back with razor focus to the program when I heard the narrator say "…this is where a chiropractor from Arkansas and his aging mother were living …"[1]

With my attention sufficiently grabbed I learned that a chiropractor and his mother were responsible for building a well-known landmark in my old neighborhood. The building, at 2139 Sunset Boulevard, was still being called the Ramona Theater as late as 2010 when I lived there. The name was certainly tenacious – Ramona had last been used around 1964. When the floor was leveled in the early 1980s, the building could not be used as a theater again. So, not the Ramona for almost half a century and not a theater for over three decades, yet it was still the Ramona Theater.

So, who was this chiropractor, or rather, who was this blind chiropractor? Licensing for chiropractic physicians did not arrive in the Golden State until 1922, so where did this information come from?

From Los Angeles Theaters blog[2] I learned:

> This building has had a long and colorful life as several theaters: the Creation, Sunset, Mitchell's, the Garden, Ramona, Studio 1, HK Studio, and Estudio 1 before a hiatus and transformation into the Mohawk Bend Coffee Shop and most recently, Pitfire.
>
> Initially it was known as Miller's Creation Theatre, named after a local chiropractor and his mother who were the first operators. In the 1915 and 1916 city directories it's listed as the Creation Theatre, running "moving pictures."
> …early owners of the building included Mark (Meek) Mitchell (1914), Nannie Ella Mitchell (1918), J.H. Phyn and R. Armour (1921), ….

Armed with these two bits, I set out to find out about Meek Mitchell. I first attempted to contact the producer of the program. That turned out to be Rory Mitchell, then owner of Valley Spring Lake Historical Consulting at 2351 Sunset Boulevard in Los Angeles. Mr. Mitchell is a filmmaker, writer and historical consultant living in Echo Park according to information he had posted online in the past. Perhaps the two are related. He has continued in the industry in Los Angeles but, as of today, he has not supplied answers. The way the information was presented in the program, it seems the building permits could have been the source of the information but that has yet to be verified and the online database does not contain the desired information.

Next I scoured the traditional genealogy sources and amassed a small stash, none of which give his occupation as chiropractor though he does appear as a physician in 1916. The list of the sources, with copies attached, I was able to locate that contained personal information about Meek Mitchell are:

Militarily, Meek followed the example of his father Captain Wiley M. Mitchell. Wiley was in Company G of the 11th Arkansas Volunteers and the Captain of Company G, 33rd Regiment, Arkansas Infantry during the Civil War. Meek, born in the first half of 1880, was in Company M of the 1st Arkansas Infantry during the Spanish-American War from 15 April to 25 October 1898. Meek returned to Camden, Arkansas before moving to Los Angeles where he is found living at 2139 West Sunset Boulevard in 1904. In 1911 and 1912 the Long Beach Daily Telegraph names Dr. Meek Mitchell as a chiropractic physician with large experience. The coastal community of Long Beach is several miles south of Los Angeles and was easily accessible using the famous Red Car Line then operating out of downtown Los Angeles. During the third week of November in 1911, Dr. E.F. Gray announced that his office at 321 Pacific Avenue would be open with Dr. Meek Mitchell in charge. In 1912 Dr. Mitchell appears in his own practice in Rooms 311-312 of the First National Bank Building. His advertisement states he is a nerve specialist, formerly with Dr. E.F. Gray and he was Five years under the supervision of the U.S. Government. After this there is no additional mention of Meek Mitchell as a chiropractor, with one important exception which will be elaborated on shortly. There is one time where he is found as a physician. He is found in the 1915 Los Angeles City Directory living a few blocks from the Sunset Boulevard address at 2027 Reservoir Street and listed as being in moving pictures but in 1916 he is a physician living directly opposite the Sunset house at 1026 Mohawk Avenue.

Several major changes to his life all happened around this same time. His brother Louie died in 1912 and the next year his widowed mother, Nannie E. Mitchell, who had lived with Louie, moved in with her only other child in Los Angeles. The two decided to go into the nascent movie industry as owners of a movie theater. Their house had a large front yard, large enough for such a venture and in February 1914 they obtained the necessary building permits. It has been reported as opening before the end of that year as the Garden Theater but that is questionable. It was open as the Creation Theater in 1915 which they operated until selling out in 1921. Reports that it went by the name of Mitchell's Creation Theater are probably a misreading of a phrase meaning the Creation Theater owned by the Meek and Nan Mitchell; likewise the Sunset Theater name is probably a misreading of the Creation Theater on Sunset.[3]

In 1915 we learn that Dr. Mitchell was married for the Press-Telegram of Long Beach on the 8th of October contained an article in which his wife Daisy is suing for divorce and seeking an order from the court preventing her husband, a local motion picture theater owner, from disposing of any property. The article states they were married in Salt Lake City on 8 July 1912. Daisy had two daughters Grace E. and Electra Katherine Palmer by an earlier marriage. When she married she owned $80,000 in property in Murphysboro, Illinois and $20,000 in Los Angeles.

She deeded $18,000 of the property to her husband which he apparently sold. Meek maintained this property transfer was done so that Daisy could leave the rest of her property to her two daughters. While a woman's property usually became her husband's property once she married, there were ways for a woman to keep her property in her name and pass it to her children without the fear of losing it upon marrying. Neither of their stories are convincing. She also claims that Meek was cruel, threatening her and her daughters on occasions and striking them as he did on the 1st of March in 1913 when they were in Springfield, Illinois. One time while she was ill he had Daisy take a cold bath which she maintained was his way of trying to kill her. She also accused him of selling her car for $1,000 and spending the money. In lieu of a divorce Daisy accepted a property settlement which, unsurprisingly, failed to improve the marriage. Two years later she is back in the newspapers suing for divorce, citing the same reasons, again. The Los Angeles Herald of April 13th 1917 reports that she had regrets accepting the property settlement instead of obtaining a divorce and now wants the court to grant her title to Mitchell's Creation Theater as compensation for the property losses as she was forced to sign the land over to her husband. She reiterates her previous allegations but this time she states her husband was a chiropratic. Meek defends his actions as the long walks and cold baths were administered a treatment for his exceedingly nervous wife. The divorce was granted on 23 November 1917 without a property settlement as that was the subject of a different lawsuit.

In 1918 Meek was noted as being practically blind in both eyes on his U.S. Army draft card. He was living with his mother at 2145 Sunset Boulevard. Perhaps as a consequence of his loss of sight or a result of his wife trying to get his property, his mother Nan seems to have become sole owner of the theater in 1919. For Nan, sources found include:

22: 1910 0418 census - Little Rock City, Pulaski Co, Arkansas Nan Mitchell w/son Louie
23: 1915 Los Angeles City Directory Nannie E Mitchell, wd Wm 2123 Marathon
24: 1925 0122 Nan Mitchell death at 1212 Maryland Av, Glendale, "home" for 5 days

In 1915 and 1916 the Los Angeles City Directory has the Creation Theater at 2139 Sunset Boulevard. In 1919 the building was extended by seven feet to accommodate the Wallis School of Dramatic Arts, not to be confused with the Wallis Annenberg Center for the Performing Arts of Beverly Hills. Francis Jordan Wallis was the director and C.W. Wallis was the president of the school they opened in 1908. The school's best-known graduates included Chester Concklin (1886-1971, left) of Keystone Cops fame and Howard McNear (1905-1969) who achieved radio fame as Doc Adams on Gunsmoke and television fame as Floyd Lawson, the flustered barber, on The Andy Griffith Show.[4]

The theater was sold to J.H. Phyn and R. Armour in 1921 and Nan died four years later. She was 81 years old and died less than ten miles from the theater in Glendale, California. She had just moved to her new home when, on the 22nd of January in 1925, she passed away.

As for the theater, it has changed many times over the one hundred and ten years it has stood at 2139 Sunset Boulevard:[5]

25: 1915 Los Angeles Directory: Creation theater, moving pictures, 2139 Sunset
26: 1915 0119 Movie announcement, Los Angeles Times
27: 1916: Los Angeles Directory: Creation theater, moving pictures, 2139 Sunset
28: 1925 Los Angeles City Directory Garden Theater
29: 1927 0521 Schwartz's Garden Theater flyer

In addition to the records above which are included, the Los Angeles City Directory of 1929 stills lists the Garden Theater while the 1931 edition reflects the name change to the Ramona Theater. In 1965 it changed to Studio 1 Theater featuring German language films. Then in 1974 it became the HK Studio Theater and in 1982 it was renamed Estudio 1, featuring Spanish language films. It was closed for most of the 1990s when it was remodeled, leveling the floor which prevented its use as a theater. In 2002 it reopened as Mohawk Bend and, as of 2025 it has been the Firepit. Several of the buildings incarnations can be seen on the following page.

After the theater was sold, Meek Mitchell moved to 8948 Santa Monica Boulevard in West Hollywood by 1925. In a rather peculiar coincidence, while the theater was close to the author's home, Dr. Mitchell's 1925 residence was less than a mile from the author's office which was at 8521 Santa Monica Boulevard. He then moved to South Bedford Street in West Los Angeles where he lived with a care giver named Bertha Jeness.

The 2nd of July in 1932 was a very hot day which found Meek inexplicably, in a shooting gallery in Long Beach. What a blind man was doing in a shooting gallery and how he secured a gun is unknown but he did. He shot himself in the head and the Los Angeles coroner ruled it a suicide. The coroner also stated the injury occurred at Meek's home at 2040 ½ South Bedford Street. His death certificate gives the informants name as Bertha Jeness. She was his care giver who lived with him. He was buried on the 6th at the Soldiers Home whose formal name is the Los Angeles National Cemetery; it also goes by the names the National Military Home and the Sawtelle Veterans Cemetery. Meek had named his care givver his executor and she promptly filed his Last Will and Testament for probate.

The Will was challenged by Reta and Ruth Mitchell on the 30th of July who claimed their blind uncle Meek was incompetent and was fraudulently influenced by Bertha. Meek had left his entire estate, valued at $50,00 to Bertha Hilda Jeness in consideration of caring for me while blind. The outcome of the suit has not been followed up on however, just who these claimed nieces were is not known. Meek had one brother Louis who died in 1919 and he had no daughters, so they were not nieces of Meek. Neither of his parents were married a second time or had any children other than their two sons. There was a John Henry Mitchell born in Arkansas and living in Los Angeles for a few decades by 1932 that did have two daughters named Reta Mae and Ruth. Just who they were and what their relationship was to Meek Mitchell is unknown. These were not his nieces and it is unclear if they had any valid legal claim on the estate of Dr. Mitchell. Reta Mae never married and passed away in Los Angeles in 1983 while her sister Ruth married a man with the surname Markee and died in 1967. The two are buried in adjoining plots in Forest Lawn, Hollywood with Ruth's husband Mr. Markee not buried with his wife whose grave marker has the word Alizaar inscribed on it. Research done on genealogical sites yielded no information that helped to identify them. In fact, the majority of information found about Wiley and Nannie Mitchell on the more popular family tree websites was wrong.

There is no indication that Meek was blind while he was practicing as a chiropractor; the first mention of that came in 1918. The circumstances are not known but it is interesting that there appears no mention of his blindness in the newspaper articles reporting on his divorce in 1917. It very well may have had a rapid and sudden onset in 1918. How it may have played into the decision to sell the theater, and perhaps, his death are intriguing questions as is the identity of the two Mitchell girls who tried to invalidate his Last Will.

NOT DESTINED TO INHERIT SECTION OF MOTHER EARTH

Despite Husband's Name Woman Says He Is Not Meek; Asks Divorce.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 8.—That there is "nothing in a name" was the underlying contention of Mrs. Daisy Mitchell when in the divorce court today she asked for a writ prohibiting her husband, Meek Mitchell, a local motion picture theater owner, from disposing of certain property and to enjoin him from molesting her.

The injunction matter was laid over until Monday, but the court admonished Meek Mitchell not to dispose of the property nor molest his wife the while.

Mrs. Mitchell alleges, in her complaint, that her husband belies his name; that he was anything but "meek" in his attitude toward her. She alleges that when she married him in Salt Lake City, July 8, 1912, she owned nearly $100,000 worth of real property in her own name. She further alleges that Mitchell got her to deed him $18,000 of this and that he sold it.

Press-Telegram (Long Beach),

THREATS TOLD IN SUIT AGAINST THEATER MAN

That there is "nothing in a name" was the underlying contention of Mrs. Daisy Mitchell when in the divorce court today she asked for a writ prohibiting her husband, Meek Mitchell, a local motion picture theater owner, from disposing of certain property and to enjoin him from molesting her.

The injunction matter was laid over until Monday, but the court admonished Meek Mitchell not to dispose of the property nor molest his wife the while.

BELIES NAME, CLAIM

Mrs. Mitchell alleges, in her complaint, that her husband belies his name; that he was anything but "meek" in his attitude toward her. She alleges that when she married him in Salt Lake City, July 8, 1912, she owned nearly $100,000 worth of real property in her own name. She further alleges that Mitchell got her to deed him $18,000 of this and that he sold it.

Mitchell alleges that his wife freely deeded him the property in question under a written agreement in order that she might will the remainder to her two beautiful daughters by an earlier marriage, Miss Grace E. and Electa Kathryn Palmer. He denies all the allegations of ill-treatment. Attorney Ingle Carpenter represented him.

In her complaint, filed through her attorneys, Andrews, Toland & Andrews, Mrs. Mitchell makes the following allegations against Meek Mitchell:

That on March 1, 1913, in Springfield, Ill., he assaulted her, cursed her and "threatened the plaintiff's oldest daughter (by a former husband), Grace E. Palmer, who was then a young girl of about 17 years of age, who attempted to protect the plaintiff against the violence of said Meek Mitchell."

That on this occasion Mitchell knocked the daughter down and struck her.

THREATS TOLD

That Mitchell "has a violent and ungovernable temper and from time to time, ever since his marriage . . . he has without cause or provocation become violently enraged against this plaintiff and in her presence has threatened her with bodily harm and cursed her."

That while she lay ill in bed, less than a year ago, Mitchell "treated her in a harsh, cruel manner" and swore and cursed at her in the presence of her daughters.

That on June 1, 1915, Mitchell struck and cursed her.

That on June 15, 1915, despite her ill state, Mitchell "compelled the plaintiff to submit to a bath in cold water and held her in the bathtub by force; whereat she screamed: 'You'll kill me!'"

That on July 15, last, Mitchell, while she and her daughter lay ill in bed, hurled a bottle of ink at her eldest daughter, scattering the ink on her face and clothing and wall.

That on September 23 Mitchell threatened to hurl her through a window and attempted to assault her with a chair.

That when she was married she owned $80,000 worth of real property in Murphysboro, Ill., and that since marriage her husband repeatedly tried to get possession of parts of this estate for himself.

That Mitchell sold his wife's automobile for $1000 and kept the proceeds.

Mrs. Mitchell asks the court to grant her a decree of divorce and to adjudge her sole owner of all the property in her estate at Murphysboro and Los Angeles.

11: 1917 0413 and 1123 Divorce, Los Angeles Herald

Los Angeles Herald, Volume XLII, Number 140, 13 April 1917

CHARGING CRUELTY, WIFE ASKS DIVORCE

Regretting the outcome of her first divorce action, in which she agreed to a property settlement in lieu of matrimonial freedom, Mrs. Daisy Mitchell has again filed suit against her husband, Meek Mitchell. She charges him with cruelty.

Mrs. Mitchell claimed in her first suit that her husband had a violent temper. She alleges he made her take a cold bath when she was ill.

At another time, she alleges, Mitchell hurled a bottle of ink at her.

Her husband, she says, was a chiropractic and under pretense of giving her treatments following her illness tried to injure her.

In addition to the cruelty charge, Mrs. Mitchell declared her husband had made her transfer her property to him and asked the court to grant her the Mitchell's Creation theater on Sunset boulevard in return for property she said she had given Mitchell.

In answer to Mrs. Mitchell's charges, Mitchell, through his attorney, Ingle Carpenter, denied that he had been cruel and said his wife was exceedingly nervous and that he was trying to cure her.

Los Angeles Herald, Volume XLIII, Number 19, 23 November 1917

HUSBAND FORCED LONG WALKS FOR HEALTH, FREED

Mrs. Daisy Mitchell, who testified she was forced by her husband to take long walks and cold baths for her health, was free of marital bonds today, Judge Avery having granted her a divorce from Meek Mitchell on the ground of cruelty. The court did not go into the question of dividing the property, valued at $80,000, as a separate suit is pending involving the property rights of the couple.

WILL IS CONTESTED

Blind Man's Nieces Seek $52,000 Estate Given Nurse

Claiming their blind uncle, Meek Mitchell, 52, was fraudulently influenced and incompetent when he made his last will, Reta Mitchell and Ruth Mitchell, the blind man's nieces, today filed a contest in superior court.

The will left by Mitchell, who died last July 2, bequeathed his entire $50,000 estate to Bertha Hilda Jenness, "in consideration of caring for me while blind."
